

Audley End House stables

English Heritage

The development of the estate is a projected animation that shows how 1,000 years of history have left their mark on the landscape at Audley End. Seven main phases of the estate's development show how woodland has been cleared, buildings erected and demolished and the surroundings shaped and reshaped by a succession of owners.

A series of short films show the people who lived and worked on the estate from the yard boy to the land steward talking about their experiences. Sequences were filmed using actors with scripted dialogue and costume.

The historian's desk is an interactive that displays different types of documents such as photos, bills, journals etc. The visitor can select a document to reveal detailed information on background material and methods of research.

Completion date
April 2010

Services
Graphic design, programming, filming, project management

Overview
Interactives and films

